Family history is more interesting than national history. It is closer to us, the members of the family. The history given here is an outline record of the family's history for only about five generations. The living members of the family have few records of vital information of their ancestors prior to this William Mills, born 1811. Those having information which will fill in certain of the blank spaces in this history should forward such information to me so that future editions of this history could be more complete. This record also contains information about the family of William Mill's second wife, Julia Ann (Tooley) Mills.

We may be unable to obtain information about the earlier generations of this family, but the present members can record information about their families that would provide their descendants with the kind of information which we would like to have about our ancestors. It is desirable that the following information be recorded for each individual. The blank pages of this record may be used for adding new information about the family.

Born -- When, where, town, county, state

Married -- Who, when, spouse's parents, spouse born

Children -- Names, birth dates

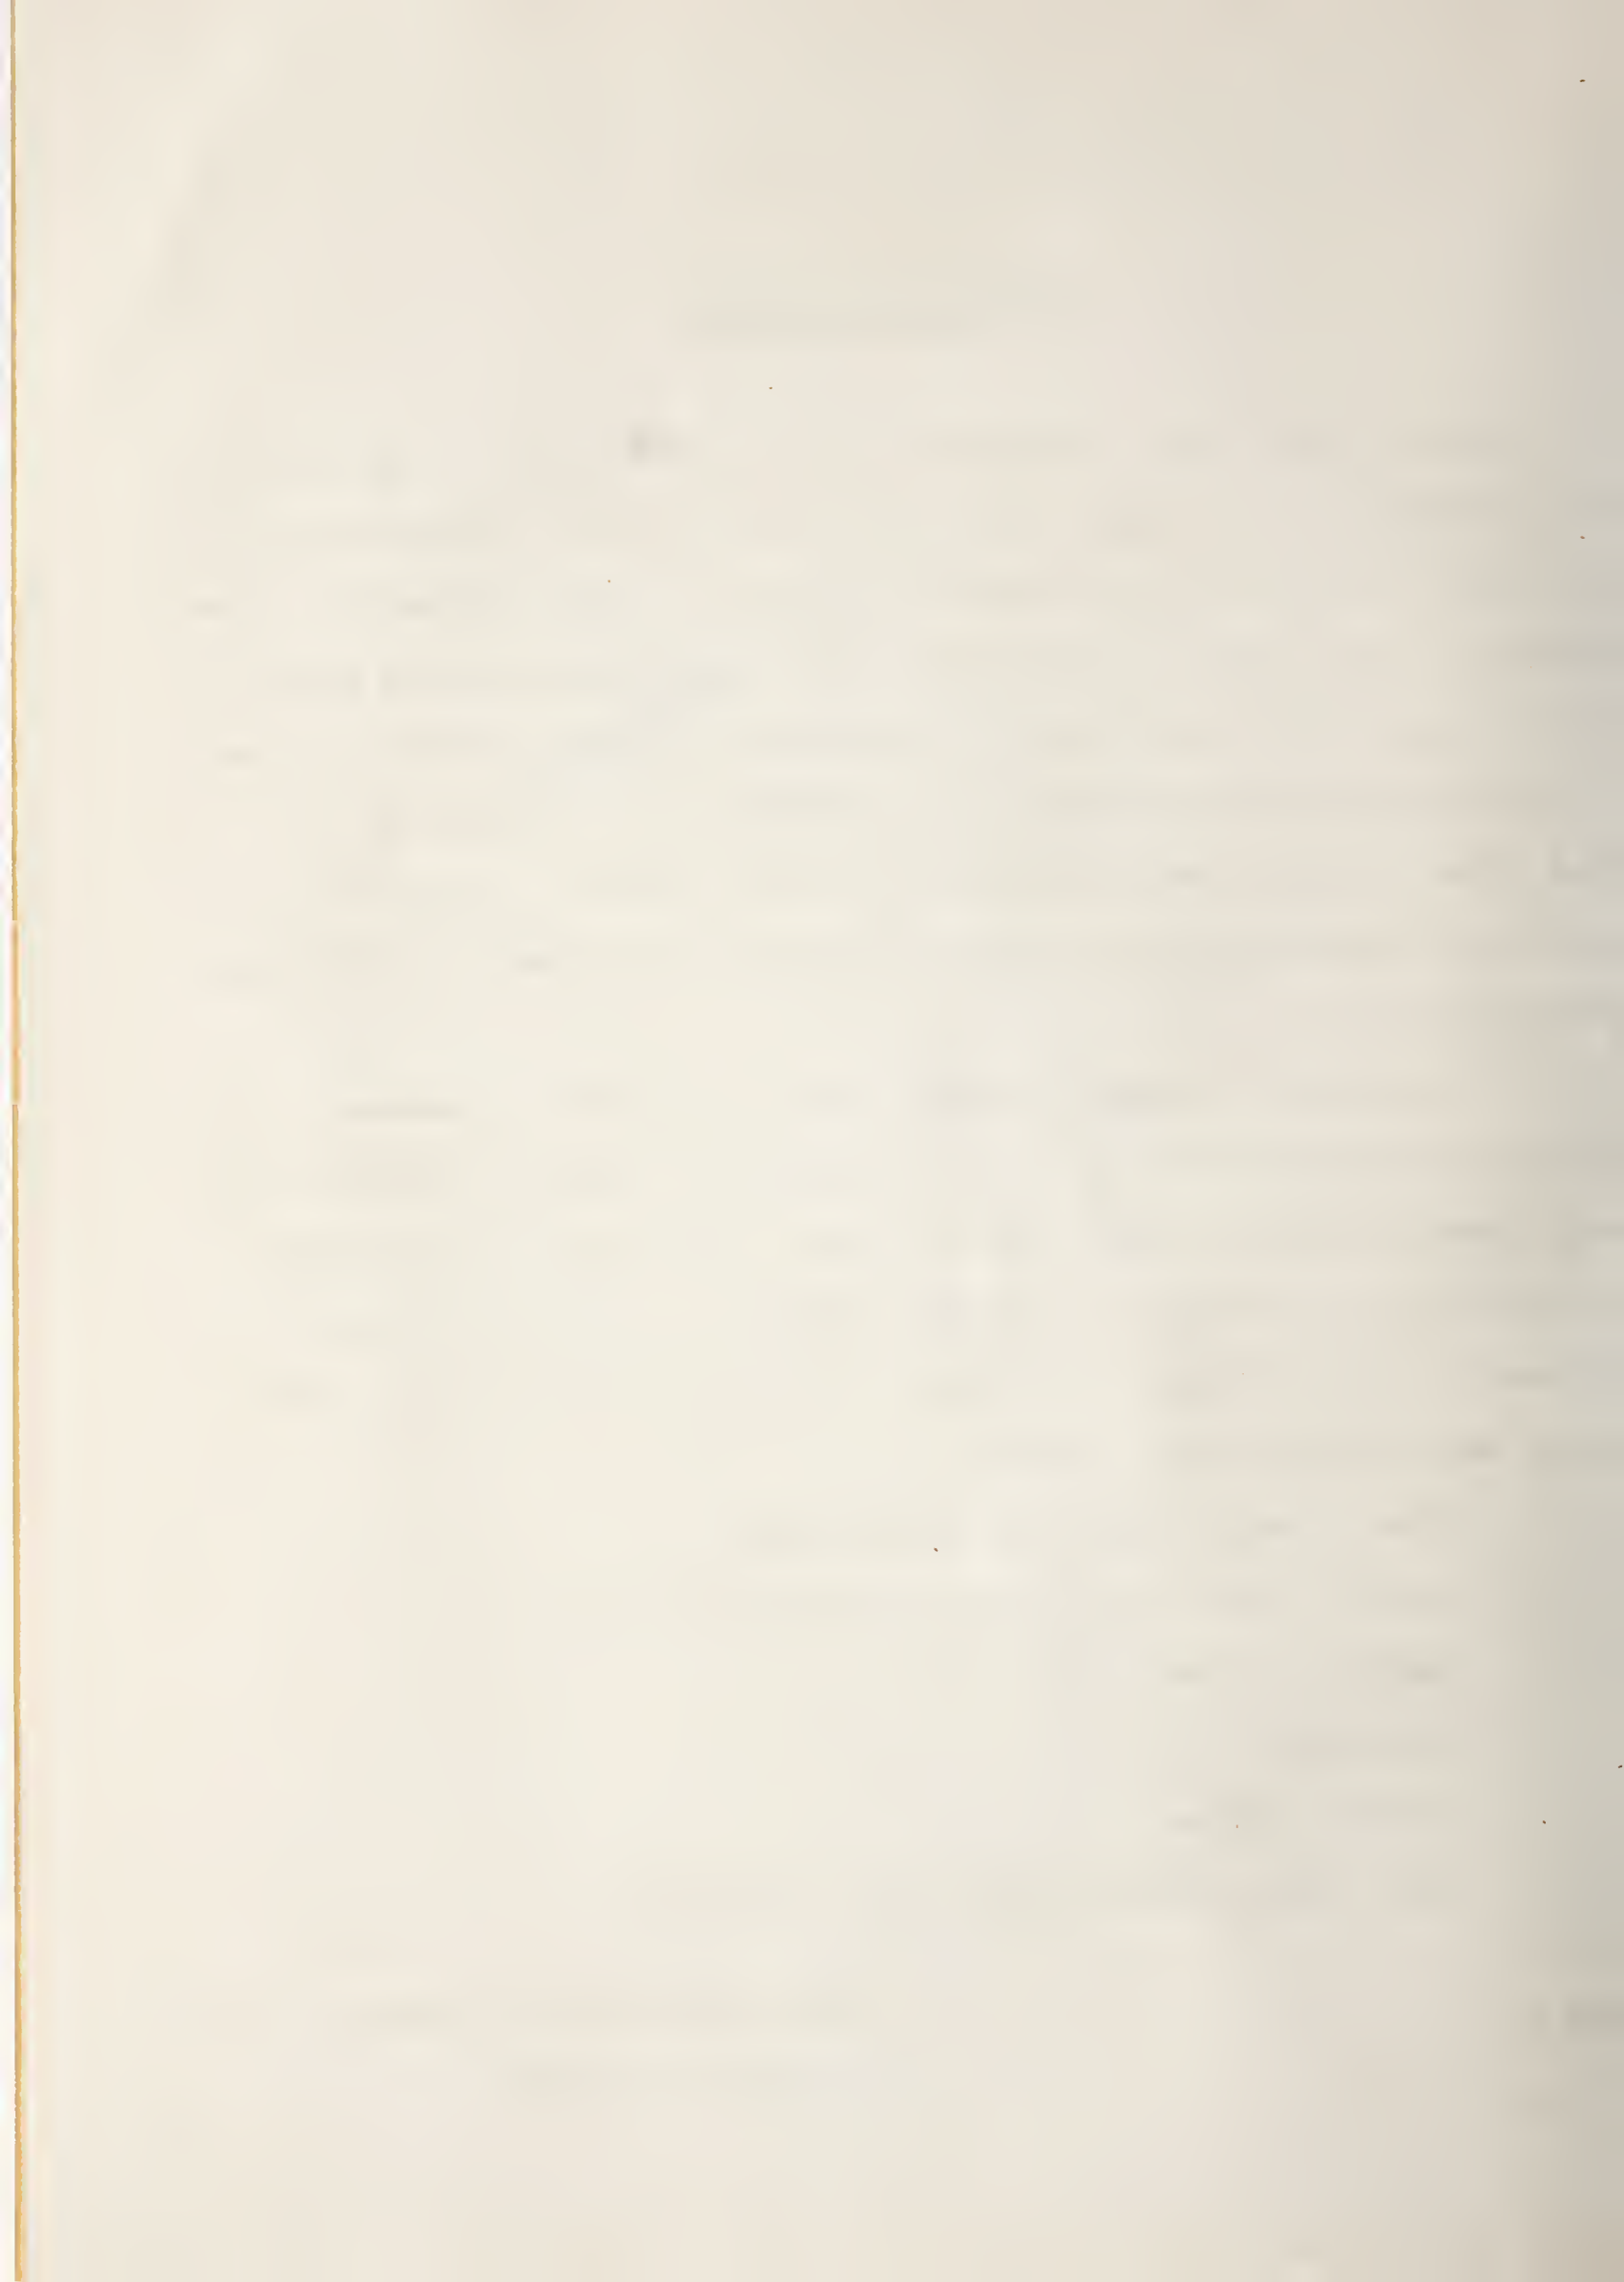

Occupation

Military Service

Died -- When, where; spouse died -- when, where

According to tradition, this branch of the Mills Family in America started in 1742 when one William Mills sailed from England for America. William and his younger brother, Isaac, went from their home in Edinburg, Scotland to North Hampton, England where each fitted out a ship and sailed for America from North Hampton in 1742.

They were separated by a big storm at sea. Isaac landed in South America and William in New York. William opened a tavern, or a hotel as we would call it now, having his name on his place of business.

The other brother, Isaac, landed in South America and became very wealthy. After twenty years had passed, he went to New York on a business trip. Walking down the street, he noticed the name, William Mills, on a building. He went in, thinking perhaps that it was his brother's, and made himself known. He said that it was a pity that they both had not landed in South America because it was much easier to accumulate wealth there than in New York. No further account was had of him afterwards.

The ancestors of William Mills, the founder of our line of Mills, named their oldest son, William, down from the William of the eighteenth century. William is a family name of the descendants of William Mills, though not always given to the oldest son in the family.

This William Mills had a sister, Amy (Mills) Long. She was a very strong woman and could lift heavy things, like a barrel of vinegar.

The Marlin Tooley Family

The Marlin Tooley family lived in or near Warren County, Ohio. Marlin Tooley enlisted in the army during the war of 1812. He took his son, aged 12, as drummer boy, but the boy was rejected. The father had to go to service, and he left the boy standing on the street in Cincinnati. Some farmer came along and took the boy home.
